The Morrisvilles defeated the Yardville, N. J. team in a game played on the home grounds on Saturday afternoon last, by the score of 28 to 3. The game was a farce, from beginning to end, as the visitors did most everything but ball playing and their actions at the bat and in the field were worse than a lot of school children, and they displayed as much life as a lot of wooden men. For the home team the pitching and batting of Cook, the batting of Meeker and the fielding of O. Justice Foster, and Bennett is deserving of special mention.

The Morrisville's will line up against the Y. M. C. A. team, at Association Field, Trenton, in the third of a series of eight games for the championship of Bucks and Mercer counties, on Saturday afternoon next. Game to be called at 3.45. DOYESTOWN.

The commencement exercises of the Doylestown High School took place in Lenape Hall on Thursday evening. The programme as announced in the GAZETTE of last week was successfully carried out. An immense audience witnessed the exercises. The stage was decorated with palms and flowers, and, of course, the graduates were exceedingly ornamental. The teachers, directors, County Superintendent and members of the Alumni were also on the stage. President Reed, of Dickinson College, delivered an eloquent address, and the orations and diplomas were also good. There were thirteen members in the class. In presenting the diplomas Secretary Hugh B. Eastburn, of the School Board, made a brief speech in which he took occasion to differ with Judge Yerkes in the latter's views on the public school system as recently expounded to the Grand Jury. While Mr. Eastburn did not refer to Judge Yerkes personally, his statement that the public school curriculum as adopted here did not tend to develop criminals was understood to meet the statement of the court that modern education is not practical and therefore has a tendency to merely sharpen the wits of those who enter a life of crime because unfitted for the everyday duties of life. A meeting of the Directors was held on Friday evening when all the teachers were re-elected except two, one of the latter, Miss Darlington, having resigned. The school term just closed has been a very successful one. Some of the graduates are non-residents of the town who sought the school because of the superior advantages it affords.

The fight for the trolley extension from the Fountain House to the Monument House ended at a special meeting of council on Saturday evening, when the company withdrew its petition for extension. There is no doubt but that the majority of Council favored the project, but a few citizens opposed it so strenuously that the company felt it was the subject of altogether unwarranted criticism and decided to let the few opponents have their way. It is said the result will be the removal of the present terminus to a point further down Main street, which will not suit the patrons of the road, whether incoming or outgoing passengers, as it means a long walk from the center of the town. At the meeting of Council another trolley matter of interest to the public came up. William C. Ryan, Esq., representing the company that proposes to build a line here from New Hope, asked for an ordinance providing for admission to the borough on Ashland street from a point on the Doylestown and New Hope pike. Mr. Ryan stated that the company had already secured the right of way in Buckingham and Doylestown townships, and was negotiating with the turnpike companies over which the roads the line will pass. It is proposed to commence the construction of the road this season, Mr. Ryan said, and the company is therefore anxious to secure the right of way into this borough. This road will be a great convienence to the public, as there is much travel between the two boroughs and intervening points, which will be materially increased with trolley facilities.

Doylestown has a citizen who appears to be pursued by a nemesis in the shape of a fire fiend and poisoner. His name is William Buckner. While Buckner was a resident of a little village below Doylestown somebody dumped about two quarts of Paris green into his pump tree and well. A barn he had just built for another party was on fire about the time it was completed. He moved to Doylestown where a house he purchased was burned just before its completion He bought another property east of town the other day and on Sunday the barn was burned. It was a small structure recently insured for $400. No strangers were seen about the premises. The fire broke out sometime after Buckner and his wife left home, and the building was destroyed during their absence. Buckner does not know that he possesses a single enemy, which makes his continued misfortune very mysterious.

The nomination of Hon. Irving P. Wanger at Bristol on Monday for another term in Congress suits the Republicans in this part of the district. At no time has there been any criticism or fault-finding with Mr. Wanger's record, which was unanimously endorsed by his renomination. The party in this county will have two candidates at the head of the ticket a second time in McKinley and Wanger. The national ticket as well as the Congressional nominee pleases Doylestown Republicans. The convention at Bristol was managed in a fashion that pleased Republicans from this vicinity immensely. The cordial reception they received and the excellent provisions made for their pleasure and convenience have resulted in very complimentary remarks concerning their hosts. The visitors from Doylestown are glad that Bristol was selected as the place for the convention.

Interesting exercises were held at Salem Reformed and the Methodist churches on Sunday. At the former church the anniversary of the dedication took place, the exercises consisting of a special sermon and music. Rev. James R. Bergey is pastor, and has been very successful in increasing the membership and interest in the church. At the Methodist Church Old Folks' Day was celebrated with exercises designed especially to interest the aged members of the church, who enjoyed a special sermon by Rev. A. Percival Hodgson, pastor, and received cards as souvenirs of the occasion.

The fair and festival of the Junior Mechanics Fife and Drum Corps was liberally patronized by the public last week, the receipts amounting to $125, which will assist the corps materially in paying for their new uniforms.

Mahlon H. Stout and Harvey Kiser, members of the Bar, have formed a partnership and will open a law office in the Rhoades building on Main street.

TULLYTOWN.

Wesley Doan, of this place, paid a visit to Mr. B. C. Kirby at Kingston last Sunday.

Mrs. F. E. Zengerl and daughter Sophie and DuBois Keller were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Wagenknight last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wagenknight have returned home after a sojourn of some months in Philadelphia at the home of their daughter.

Misses Annie and Luella Herman, formerly of this place, now of Bristol, were the guests of their aunt, Mrs. Felex Rudolph from Saturday till Monday.

Henry Lovett, proprietor of the White Horse Hotel here, has placed a railing around his front porch and supplied the porch with a dozen rockers for the comfort of his guests.

The chicken supper in aid of the debt fund of the M. E church, and which will be held on the lawn of Mrs. Harry Simpson, at Edgley this evening, promises to be the best attended and most profitable entertainment held for the liquidation of the church debt. Provision will be made for one hundred and fifty guests, and the small admission fee, twenty-five cents, ought to insure at least that number.

Those who attended the Congressional convention at Bristol on Monday expressed themselves as well pleased with the entertainment of the Bristolians and the Convention generally. Those who attended were William Garman, Theodore Burton, A. B. Headley, Oliver Harper, William Stokes, and A. R. Wagenknight. While the result of the Convention was a forgone conclusion, considerable interest in the affair had arisen from the expected gossip on the legislative question. As was anticipated this formed the principal topic of discussion. There is no need of disguising the fact that there is a strong and growing sentiment here against returning to the state legislature the present members from Bucks county. The delegation from this county to the state convention voted by a vote of four to one to endorse the present administration and support Senator Quay for re-election to the United States' Senate. The natural inference would be that the county organization would be favorable to the nomination of such men to the legislature as would follow the Republican organization at least so far as to attend to the party caucus and abide by its decision. This was believed by many to be the prospective course of the leaders of the county up to a few weeks ago. Since that time it has transpired that these same men who endorsed the administration in the state and the appointment of Senator Quay are now willing to turn about and stand for the re-nomination of the present three members of the legislature who refused, even after the most intense pressure, to attend the Republican caucus at Harrisburg. While most of the Republicans recognize the necessity for leadership they want consistant leadership. This turning about like a weather cock at each political wind gust will eventually discredit any man or set of men among their fellows in the state organization. At the last state convention the Republican party of Bucks county placed itself on record as in favor of sustaining the state organization and it cannot now afford to repudiate its action there. No sane man believes that the present members will be returned even if renominated unless they stand with the Republican party. What right have three men who, themselves, refuse to abide by the decision of a party caucus, to expect the support of a united party when they are nominated by its caucus or convention? What consistency! "We, the members of the legislature, refuse to be bound by the caucus of the Republican party: You, the voters of the Republican party, must be bound by the decision of the party convention and re-elect us." The one conclusion from such reasoning is that they will be treated by the Republican party as they have treated that party. If they wish to receive the nomination of the Republican party let them announce themselves as Republicans willing to stand by the organization that elected them, but otherwise let them remain where they themselves have taken refuge, in the ranks of the guerillas and insurgents, without the camp.

LANGHORNE.

Samuel C. Eastburn returned home on the 24th from his three weeks' business trip.

Last Friday, Mitchell Watson and wife returned from a delightful trip to "Sheere's Landing," Maryland, where Mr. Watson reports fine sport in rock fishing in the Susquehanna.

Miss Grace P. Leaw, one of the teachers in the Langhorne public school last winter, has been appointed a teacher of the secondary B grade in the Ambler, Montgomery county school.

The base ball game on the old ball ground on South Bellevue avenue on Saturday afternoon, between Langhorne and Doylestown, resulted in a great victory for the Doylestown team.

Last Thursday, what might have proven a destructive fire from the unruly action of Mrs. Alfred Wildman's oil stove in her kitchen, was prevented by the timely aid of kind neighbors, who saw the smoke and hastened to the rescue, just in season to prevent a general conflagration. The stove had been left alone for a few minutes, both mistress and maid being engaged upstairs. Constant companionship seems to be a vital necessity both with oil and gasoline stoves: with that, and a goodly amount of sensible care, there is no more danger resultant from their use than from that of gas stoves, and country folk cannot have the latter to lessen the heat these busy summer days in their kitchens.

Twenty-three members of the Porch Club gathered on the beautifully shaded porch of Mrs. Andrew M. Bye's home, in Langhorne Manor, on Wednesday morning, the 20th, to enjoy a very pleasing programme while fingers were busy with a variety of needle and fancy work. As the names were called by the chairman for the month, Mrs. Samuel C. Eastburn, responses were made with items of public and private interest, some of them calling forth entertaining discussion, as opinions differ delightfully on most subjects, thus preventing any danger from monotony in our busy world. Miss Murple next very kindly repeated the reading of her paper on "Honore de Balzac," which Sorosis enjoyed last winter; this was a fine prelude to readings from one of this gifted author's best works, which is to be continued at each meeting for from twenty minutes to a half hour, so as to leave a season for social converse before adjournment, as this has become a necessity to members of Sorosis when they meet, so thoroughly are they welded together, even as members of a large and loving family.

Ghosts would frighten many people who are not afraid of germs. Yet the germ is a real danger. If this microscopic animalism could be magnified to a size in proportion to its deadliness it would show like a giant python, or fire breathing dragon. The one fact to remember is that the germ is powerless to harm the body when the blood is pure. It is far easier to keep the germ out than to drive it out after it obtains a hold in the system. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the most powerful and perfect of blood purifying medicines. It increases the quantity as well as the quality of the blood, and enables the body to resist disease, or to throw it off if disease has obtained a footing in some weak organ. Wherever the digestion is impaired, the nutrition of the body is diminished, for the blood is made from the food which is eaten, and half digested food cannot supply the blood in quantity and quality adequate to its needs. For this condition there is no remedy equal to "Golden Medical Discovery." It cures ninety-eight out of every hundred persons who give it a fair trial. When there is constipation Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets will promptly relieve and permanently cure.

THURSDAY JUNE 28, 1900.

It is now time for the Hon. Billy Bryan to issue a manifestation of sympathy for the murdering Chinese.

McKinley and Roosevelt is a combination that cannot be broken by the Democratic-Populistic party this year.

It is now believed that in his early childhood the Hon. William Sulzer, one of the latter-day Democratic leaders, swallowed a toy bellows.

Lemuel E. Quigg, of New York, is accused of monkeying with the Republican National platform and robbing it of its essential features.

It is highly amusing to watch the painful efforts of the insurgent organs to explain away the great ovation given to Colonel Quay in the National Convention.

Next Wednesday the Democrats at Kansas City will "view with alarm" the conditions of prosperity which are abroad in the land. The Republican party will be denounced, and the virtues of Democracy extolled.

Mules are not kicking these days. They find they are better appreciated and better treated because they are worth $12 a head more to the farmers this year than they were at the beginning of 1897, before the Republican Administration.

More contributions to our institutions of learning have been made under the present Administration than at any other period in the history of the country. Education is receiving its full share of the products of prosperity, and education will contribute liberally to the sentiment for good government.

Admiral Dewey declares he will not allow himself to be a tin can tied to the tail of the Bryan dog. The Admiral is a political corpse whose life was extinguished by a feminine hand. Up to the time when Dewey became a victim of the designs of an ambitious woman the word of the Admiral stood against the world; now there's none so poor to do him reverence.

McKinley and Roosevelt are known quantities. Each has served his country in peace and in war. Both are experienced in the science of government. Both are clean, honored, capable and respected officers of the government. It would have been utterly impossible for the Republican National Convention to have made a better or stronger selection. Both men were the unanimous first choice of the convention and it is strongly felt that the ticket will be elected by even a greater majority than that which was accorded the Republican ticket four years ago.

Harmony seems to be the feature of Republican conventions this year. Following the National Convention at which there was no strife, the Congressional Convention at Bristol on Monday transacted its business amidst peaceful enthusiasm. Hon. Irving P. Wanger was the unanimous choice of the Republicans of the respective counties. Mr. Wanger's course in Congress has been directed with true regard for his constituency. His representation of the people has been capable and earnest, and as a result he is to be returned to the Nation's capital for the fifth term.

THE QUAY OVATION.

In view of the fact that some of the Quay-hating Philadelphia organs, which have formed entangling advertising alliances, have made great efforts to make it appear that the great spontaneous outburst of enthusiasm which was given to Colonel Quay in the Philadelphia Convention was the result of packing the galleries, we give space today to an unprejudiced report of the proceedings. The fact is the demonstration was one that took the insurgents off their feet and an equilibrium has hardly yet been recovered. "Penn," the erudite writer on the "Evening Bulletin," an anti-Quay paper, has the following to say concerning the ovation:

"There has been no more diverting exhibition of Convention enthusiasm, which, for the most part, had been pumped up rather painfully in a feebly paroxysmal fashion, than the Quay incident. When the Pennsylvanian got on his feet to make his motion on the question of Southern representation, his thin voice could hardly be heard beyond a few yards from his seat. It was somewhat surprising to those who have hitherto viewed him in conventions, in which he seldom has been disposed to make himself conspicuous, unless it was absolutely necessary to his interests, to see him, after a momentary reluctance, respond to the shouts that he should mount the platform and explain his motion. It has been a long time since Quay has looked so well on such an occasion. With his light gray suit, his white vest and his generous shirt bosom, and his head of well preserved brown hair, which is remarkable for a man of sixty-four, he had little of the aspect of the "old man," except the spectacles which he carried fidgetily in his hands. It is well known that so far as mere personal vanity and gratification is concerned, he is entirely indifferent to demonstrations of public admiration, and is usually disposed to be shy of them. But when he reached the platform and showed himself in full view of the vast audience, there broke forth a roar of applause about which there could be no mistake. It had the genuine convention whirl to it, as it swept up and down the hall in the course of the next minute or two, and made the previous acclaims over Roosevelt and McKinley's names appear somewhat insignificant. Quay stood there as if it was really more than he might have counted on. He looked at Lodge and Gen. Bingham, who sat near by, and even at Hanna, in a sort of mute appeal for order, and then deprecatingly waved his hand for silence in a half-laughing, half-impatient fashion. Then up again came the roar from the Pennsylvania section, spreading quickly to the crowds, and Quay's red face this time looked a little awkward and abashed. He muttered something to Lodge, who pounded the table with his gavel, and the din subsided enough to allow the Pennsylvanian, in a few simple words, to explain his motion. It was not difficult to note enjoyment in Quay's ordinarily well-controlled countenance as he moved back to his seat. He had really shown himself, so far as the measure of applause could be taken, the biggest hero of the convention during its first two days. He may have been moved by a mischievous delight, too, in having the exhibition take place directly under the nose of the supervising Hanna, but however that may be, there was no doubt that M. S. Quay, in the great council of his party, scored the one great personal hit of the whole show, and created the most interesting 'scene' of the day."

Bristol has set the pace for future political conventions in Bucks and Montgomery counties. The greeting accorded the delegates and visitors here on Monday was a complete surprise to all. Never before in the history of local conventions had such preparations been made to honor the visitors. The people of Bristol, irrespective of party are to be congratulated for their hearty responses to exigencies of the occasion. There is nothing but praise to be bestowed. The manner in which funds were contributed, and in which an effort was made to decorate stores and residences was highly commendable and loud were the praises heard on all sides. Bristol has proved itself to be a wide-awake town when it is once stirred up. Hundreds of people who had never visited the borough were amazed at the beauty of the streets which skirts the Delaware. The views of the river were declared to be superb, and without a doubt the many visiting newspaper men will say many nice things about Bristol and Bristolians.

Farmers should remember that sheep in Ohio were worth just $2 a head more on the first day of this year than they were worth on the 1st day of January, 1895. The increase in the value of sheep under this Republican Administration was about the same in all the States of the country.

Falling Wall Kills Father and Son.

On Monday afternoon, Wilbur F. Miller and his son, Hiram F. Miller, were killed by the collapse of a wall of the Bell Telephone Exchange Building in course of erection at Seventeenth street and Allegheny avenue, Philadelphia. Wilbur F. Miller, who was superintendent for the contractor, was the son in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Peirce, of Bristol, and with his son, who had charge of the construction of the building, were well known to many Bristol people.

At the time of the accident the elder Miller was seated astride an iron beam on the second floor, and was giving directions to several men nearby, and had turned to answer to a call from his son, who also was in the room. Just then a half dozen colored laborers began removing the keys that supported the steel archway which held the heavy cement roof. Board after board was quickly taken away, and when the last was reached part of the north wall collapsed. This wall was about forty feet in height. With a deafening sound it parted near the middle and fell outward, narrowly missing a dozen or more laborers who were mixing mortar and cement on the ground.

Not more than thirty seconds had passed when the accident that resulted in the death of the Millers occurred. The wall gone, the main support of the cement roof was likewise gone. In the face of the impending danger the men in the building became helpless from fear, and the next moment the roof had fallen, carrying with it the second floor beams, leaving the elder Miller and his son crushed under tons of concrete.

When those who hurried to the rescue reached the scene Hiram Miller was found wedged beneath a broken girder on the ground floor. He was unconscious, and blood was streaming from a deep gash in his temple. A dozen hands started to his rescue, and in ten minutes had cleared the space sufficiently enough to allow the crushed form of the young engineer to be gently dragged out. He was carried across the street and sent to the Samaritan Hospital. While this was going on another party of rescuers were in search of the superintendent.

A ladder was hoisted to the top of the broken wall. Up this clambered three or four men. When they reached the second landing the wrecked condition of the place prevented their seeing Miller. He had been pinioned astride the same girder on which a half hour before he had sat giving orders to his men. Tons of concrete partly covered his crushed and bleeding body and had so injured him that at first the rescuers thought him dead. He was quickly carried down the ladder and lifted into the Samaritan Hospital ambulance, and the race for life began. Out Allegheny avenue the horses dashed, and when on Broad street it was but a minute when the hospital gate was reached. As the doctors were carring him up the steps he expired, without having regained consciousness.

The funeral of the father and son takes place this afternoon from their late residence 1929 Wallace street, Philadelphia. Interment at Northwood Cemetery.

THAT GREAT TRIBUTE TO COLONEL QUAY.

Stalwarts Delighted With the Ovations in the National Convention to Their Leaders.

INSURGENTS WERE REBUKED.

But by a Great Stroke of Politics Opposition to the Hero of San Juan Hill Was Brushed Aside and the Party Is Accordingly Strengthened.

(Special Correspondence.)

Harrisburg, June 26.—With the return of the party leaders who went to attend the Republican national convention it would seem that no development in that gathering could be more significant to the Republicans of Pennsylvania than the demonstration of popular favor with which Col. Quay was honored in the ovations given him at different times during the sessions of the convention.

This feature of the national convention should be taken under consideration by the insurgents of Pennsylvania. These honors were showered upon Col. Quay by the delegations representing Republican sentiment in every section of the Union. Every impartial observer in the convention must admit that the cheers given Col. Quay when he arose to speak in last Wednesday's session exceeded in enthusiasm and duration those accorded any other individual who sat in that convention, Governor Roosevelt excepted. The demonstration was the subject of general comment and the fact was telegraphed by the Associated Press as one of the striking features of the day. The cheers which greeted the former chairman of the national committee came from no particular part of the hall, for they were as general as they were earnest and spontaneous. These ovations were a fitting rebuke to the men who have for years been slandering and misrepresenting Col. Quay simply because he has refused to follow their dictations or because he has stood in the way of their aspirations. It has been a source of amusement for the friends of the Beaver statesman to watch the insurgent newspapers of this state inventing new explanations each day of how this demonstration over Col. Quay was brought about. It was so clearly a case of the people giving vent to their feelings of regard for the veteran leader that the subsidized editors might try until doomsday without in the slightest degree detracting from the honor which these thousands of Republicans showered upon Col. Quay in that convention.

ELKIN ON THE RESULT.

"Senator Quay forced the Roosevelt issue," said Attorney General Elkin, in discussing the result of the convention, "and when it was known strong influences opposed his nomination, and had picked out another candidate from New York. He made the fight in his characteristic, shrewd and tactful way. At no time was he on the defensive. The opposition was obliged to change from one candidate to another, but always without success in concentrating enough strength to check the Roosevelt sentiment.

"The ovations given to Senator Quay throughout the proceedings of the convention are appreciated by every stalwart Republican of the Keystone state. They were the answer of the people of our state to the vilifications that have been heaped upon him by his political opponents in Pennsylvania.

"Altogether, Quay was the dominating influence of the convention.

"It continues him as one of the important factors in national politics."

INSURGENTS REBUKED.

Much attention was attracted throughout Pennsylvania to the case of the contest from the state of Delaware over the admission of delegates to the national convention between the Addicks and the Higgins factions. The members of the national committee who heard the testimony in this controversy were eager to bring about harmony in Delaware, with the hope of carrying the state in November for President McKinley. The Addicks men agreed to harmonize, and made a proposition to have a general primary election, to which voters of all factions would be invited. They declared that they would abide by the action of the majority of such voters. The Higgins men, like the Flinn-Martin insurgents in Pennsylvania, refused to agree to this plan, as they knew they were in the minority, and had but a small percentage of the Republican voters at their back. Mr. Manley, of Maine, the old time Blaine leader, who was in the chair at the time, declared that he would not stand for that sort of politics. "If you are not ready to abide by the will of the majority," said he, "you have no claim to be Republicans. That the majority shall rule is one of the fundamental principles of our party."

After repeated efforts to get the Higgins men to accept the proposition to let the issue go to a vote the national committeemen referred the matter to the committee on credentials of the convention. The Higgins leaders would not change their tactics. They still would not agree to any proposition which would involve the candidacy of Mr. Addicks for United States senator. Like the insurgents of this state, who will not listen to any plan which would leave to the people the matter of the election of Col. Quay to the United States senate, the Higgins men refused to act upon the suggestion of the national leaders. The result was that the committee on credentials of the national convention recommended the seating of the entire Addicks delegation from Delaware by a vote of 39 to 9. This should be an object lesson to the party bolters of the Keystone state.

REVOLT AGAINST FLINN.

There are unmistakable evidences of the fact that the element in Pennsylvania politics known as the Republican insurgents are in a desperate frame of mind. The past two weeks have given them several body blows. While their financial resources continue to be almost unlimited, they are suffering from lack of regular support, which is having its effect upon some of their principal leaders. Martin and Flinn are still at the head of the procession, and the Wanamaker money bags are not far behind them. The array of generals, all with personal interests to serve and private ambitions to satisfy, is still as great as ever, but there is a marked absence of followers for their leaders. Without followers they cannot expect more than what they have been getting—a large amount of insurgent newspaper puffing with little substantial results at the primary elections. The spectacle which the insurgents, with Flinn at their head, made of themselves at the national convention in Philadelphia has disgusted their former followers throughout the state. Coming so closely after the Pittsburg scandals, in which Flinn figured as a political headsman in removing a competent and popular public official from office who refused to do his bidding, this exhibition has practically brought to a realization of the true situation many who were influenced by the false arguments and misrepresentations of the insurgents.

The popular movement against the domination of Flinn in Pittsburg continues to be the subject of comment among public spirited and representative citizens in the western section of the state. There is every evidence that there will be an organization of business men, manufacturers and others, who have the welfare of the Republican party at heart, to overthrow the machine which has enabled Flinn to assume the role of dictator of Pittsburg politics and to make thousands of dollars every year through his contracts with the municipality. The independence of Mr. Bigelow, who, as director of public works of Pittsburg, blocked many of the Flinn schemes to get contracts for municipal improvements, when it was to the interests of the taxpayers to reject Flinn's bids, led to his being made the subject of attack of this so-called reformer. As has frequently been said, Flinn is for reform in every quarter of the state excepting in Allegheny county, where his control of the machine has been the means of his amassing a great fortune through the public contracting business.

Bigelow's removal from the office of director of public works is charged directly against Flinn. Bigelow introduced many reforms, and the people looked upon him as their special champion in all great movements for the improvement of the city and the protection of their interests. Now, since he has been ousted by Flinn, they propose to rally around him, and the logical result will be an organization which will ultimately drive Flinn from control of the Republican organization and place him upon the level with all other bidders for public work.

The state press has taken up the criticisms of Flinn in the Pittsburg newspapers which are not controlled by the Flinn ring, and everywhere his actions in the Bigelow matter have been roundly condemned. Flinn was given some idea of what the Republicans of the state thought about his caucus bolting record during the sessions of the legislature last winter, when it was announced that he was a candidate for chairman of the Republican state committee, and he went on the stump to advocate the nomination of anti-Quay members of the legislature. It was the subject of universal comment that wherever Flinn made speeches the insurgents were bound to lose, and this fact was soon impressed upon Flinn's coworkers in the insurgent cause, so that he was finally persuaded to retire from the stump.

While the Wanamaker money, David Martin's revenge and the petty interests of a small disgruntled element constitute the substance of the insurgent movement, Flinn still continues as its recognized leader. Flinn is busy pulling the wires to further his scheme for the nomination of candidates on the Republican ticket who will bolt the Republican caucus on the United States senatorship at Harrisburg next winter and act with the Democrats, as he and his associates did last year. Where he cannot carry the Republican primaries he is working for the fusion game with Democratic National Committeeman Guffey to prevent, if possible, the election of regular Republican candidates for the legislature who will go into the caucus in the event of their election and abide by the action of a majority in the selection of a candidate for United States senator.

Approximate expenditures on account of our war with Spain, during the years 1898 and 1900 inclusive, amounted to $372,000,000. Taking this sum out of the total expenditures during that period, the surplus of revenue during the first three years of President McKinley's term would have been over $317,000,000.

Thomas Jefferson was never frightened by the cry of "imperialism." Nor did he ever consort with and encourage the enemies of his country.

The Quick and the Dead.

Doylestown Democrat.

Quay's appearance, at the Republican Convention, roused more enthusiasm than McKinley, Hanna or Roosevelt. From this evidence the "old man" is not quite as dead as some of his detractors. His history is a case wherein a politician comes back to plague his inventors. We learn the sick report, from the Anti Quayites, is very much lengthened since the Republican National Convention has been heard from.

The Centrals Were Afraid.

Last Saturday afternoon, the Bloomsdale Baseball Club were to have played the Centrals on the former's grounds, but just before the game commenced, the captain of the Centrals asked to see the ball, and after looking at it he said it was too small and too light, and, as it had been arranged, all the players said so, but the Centrals are the only club that has refused to play with this ball, and Spalding's Rules recommend the use of this ball for boys' clubs. Consequently, the Central's kick was weak, and had no foundation.

Next Saturday, the Bloomsdale Club will play the Pedros in the third game of the series. D. LANDRETH.

Walt McDougall, the cartoonist employed by the North American and on other papers to make funny pictures, is a native of Bucks county. When a boy he attended school at Erwinna. He was considered none too bright in his studies, says a fellow schoolmate, but had peculiar talent for making pictures, and more than once was obliged to "remain after school for setting the boys in an uproar because of his slate pencil sketches." McDougall is considered one of the best cartoonists of the day.

A GHASTLY FIND.

THE DECOMPOSED BODY OF AN UNKNOWN MAN FOUND WITHIN A FEW FEET OF MILL STREET.

The body of an unknown man, decomposed beyond all identification, was found on Monday afternoon in a deserted barn back of the old Rogers lumber sheds on Mill street, near the canal. The discovery was made by a hostler of one of the canal stables who was taking a team of mules to the lower lock. Having occasion to enter the deserted stable he discovered the feet of a man hanging over the boards of the dilapidated floor above.

Undertaker Rue was notified and then ensued a sickening job. The flesh on the unknown's face and hands was entirely gone and the body so badly decomposed that the stench was awful. When the form was rolled over on a sheet thousands of vermin scampered in all directions.

The Coroner held an inquest but there was no evidence from which a verdict could be rendered. It is supposed the man had been sick and went into the deserted building and died. Death occurred at least ten days or two weeks ago.

The man was an umbrella mender, as a stack of umbrellas and a kit of repairing tools were found by his side. There were no papers or other articles of identification found about his person. The body was buried in the potters' field.

Hull, Millersville Normal School; Song—"Happy Day," School; Presentation of Certificates—John K. Wildman, President of School Board; Song—"Farewell," Moschelles, School; Alumni Greeting.

It is reported that Colonel Edward Morrell, of Philadelphia, who for a number of years has been President and principal stockholder of the Upper Delaware River Transportation Company, has retired from the organization and a new management formed.

Many improvements to the boat landings along the route are being contemplated by the new company.

Tuesday representatives of the boat company and the Burlington Councilmanic Street Committee held a conference relative to making substantial repairs and improvements to the Burlington town wharf, and it is expected that conclusions will be reached whereby that locality will at no distant day be made much more attractive than at present.

Miss Lattimer is a graduate of the Bristol school, and also of the West Chester Normal School and has been teaching in the upper part of the county for the past year. The salaries were fixed the same as last year. The treasurer's bond of $15,000 was approved.

Narrow Escape From Railroad Accident

The passengers on the train which leaves Bristol at 9:19 a. m. had a narrow escape from a serious railroad accident on Tuesday morning. The train had just started after taking on the Bristol passengers, when the main driving axle of the engine broke. If the accident had occurred a minute later or sooner, while the train was under headway, there is no telling what the result might have been. All passengers were transferred to the Belvidere express, which stops at Bristol to let off passengers at 9 24 The baggage and mail was put on the 10:29. The crippled engine was taken to the local yards and blocked up and taken to the shops.

Another Barn and Horses Burned.

The barn of James Myers anp Jacob Bowman, the truckers, located on the mill race back of Bath street, near Buckley, was destroyed by fire last Friday night at about 11.30 o'clock. The barn was totally destroyed and two horses burned to death. The fire was believed to be of incendiary origin. A few weeks ago the barn of Michael Callahan, in the same neighborhood, was also mysteriously burned, and in the latter case two horses also lost their lives. Both fires occurred at about the same hour. Owing to the similarity in circumstances it is believed that barn burners are working in this vicinity. Myers and Bowman had $100 insurance on each of the horses and $150 on the barn.

Met Death on Trolley Line.

Joseph Horn, a well known character about Bristol, was killed on the Newtown and Bristol trolley road near Hulmeville, on Saturday night. Horn evidently had been intoxicated, as a bottle of whiskey was found in his pocket. Motorman Charles Taylor saw the form of the man lying across the tracks when within a few yards of him, but was unable to sufficiently check the speed of the car to prevent an accident. He was lying with his head on the bank and legs across the rails. The wheels ran over the limbs of the man and dragged the body under the car, tearing frightful gashes. Death was supposed to be instantaneous.

The body was brought to Bristol and Coroner Kunsman notified. An inquest was held at Fine's hotel, on Monday, and a verdict rendered in accordance with the facts The trolley company and the motorman were exonerated from all blame.

The deceased leaves a daughter and two sons, the latter—Peter and Orie Horn—reside in Bristol. The daughter lives in Philadelphia.

Trolley Accidents.

About 9 o'clock on Sunday morning two cars collided on the Newtown trolley between Langhorne and Hulmeville. The road was not operated on schedule time and the cars were run regardless of turnouts.

The cars came together with great force and both were badly damaged. In one car there was but one passenger and in the other there were twelve. Motorman Yocum was pretty badly injured, having been cut about the head. One of the passengers, a girl, was also severely hurt. Several other passengers were slightly injured.

"A collision between the last trolley car from Doylestown and the tender of the engine of the midnight train occurred at the Lincoln avenue crossing Newtown, shortly before 1 o'clock last Thursday morning," says the "Enterprise." "The engine was backing from the depot to the roundhouse when it struck the trolley car. The latter was turned athwart the track and considerably damaged. One axle was bent, a flange broken from a wheel, two or three windows shattered, &c. The crew of the engine assisted in getting the car back on the track, when it was pulled to the barn by another car. The damaged car is one of the new ones put on when the road was opened to Doylestown. The accident is said to have been due to a misunderstanding between the crews. Motorman Sherman and Conductor Trexler were in charge of the trolley car."

Grand Fraternity.

Bristol Camp, No. 78, Grand Fraternity, held its monthly meeting on Monday evening, 25th inst. It being semi-annual election of officers, the following were elected for the ensuing term: P. C., Thos. S. Harper; C., Herbert A. Pettitt; V C, John N. De Groot; Marshall, Jas. A. Moore; Treasurer, W. I. Davis; Trustees, J. A. Moore, R. J Hetherington and A. Rathke. Recorder E L Leigh was re-elected.

A gloom was cast over this meeting owing to the death of Frater D. A. Brownlee, and the charter was ordered to be draped for a period of thirty days. While the members deplore the death of their deceased brother, still they rejoice to know that through the organization his loved ones have been provided for and will be cared for. One thousand dollars was paid the widow nine days after his death, and three days after proof of death had been sent to the general office. This certainly was an investment for the brother's family, he having paid in altogether about $10 But although the money has been paid, this does not settle the obligation, as the organization has to see that this widow and her children shall never want for bread or a friend so long as the one lives and the others are in their minority. President Gaston has written a personal letter to Frater Brownlee's widow, asking her to at all times take advantage of this part of the agreement between the Grand Fraternity and its members.

On Friday evening the service of dedication will be conducted by the pastor assisted by the Rev. Dr. J. H. Mason Knox, Rev. Edward P. Shields, D. D., Rev. Jacob Weidman, and Rev. Henry F. Lee, all former pastors of the church. Drs. Knox and Shields were also for years superintendents of the Sabbath School. Their greetings will thus be of a double character. The Rev. Charles Wood, D. D. pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia will deliver the dedication address. The occasion will be a notable one and also a historical event in our community.

A cordial invitation is extended to all who can conveniently attend the service of dedication. The fact that the buildings are entirely free of debt, thus precluding the necessity of a money appeal at the opening services, greatly augments the pleasure of all concerned in anticipating the auspicious occasion. The services begin Friday evening as near to 7.45 as possible but in no event later than 8 o'clock.

A GREAT CONVENTION.

THE CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION HELD IN BRISTOL A DEPARTURE FROM REGULAR PRACTICE—WANGER UNANIMOUSLY RE NOMINATED.

The first political convention ever held in Bristol was a record breaker.

It has been conceded by every one of the visitors that there never has been a convention held in either Bucks or Montgomery county that has equalled the Bristol convention in matter of arrangements or reception to guests. Bristol has done herself proud and can rest content in the knowledge that there was not the slightest detail left unarranged to make the occasion a perfect success.

The Committee on Finance and the Committee on Arrangements worked hard to make the affair a success, but feel amply repaid for their labors for the manner in which the citizens of the borough responded to every suggestion.

The Auditorium was beautifully and artistically decorated with red, white and blue bunting, and flags, Chinese lanterns and palms and rubber plants. The ceiling was festooned with long streamers of bunting which ran from the corners and sides of the building and were gathered at a point in front of the stage, at which juncture was suspended an immense Chinese lantern. The front and sides of the stage were covered with bunting and artistically draped with flags, while a canopy was made to reach out over and stretched back of the platform by using a large garrison flag. One thousand chairs were placed in a semi circle, the delegates from each county being seated directly in front of the stage. The two delegations were separated and their places marked by standards bearing the words "Montgomery" and "Bucks," after the manner of National conventions. Each delegate was presented with a handsome souvenir badge, the bar across the top bearing the word "delegate." A blue silk ribbon supported a medallion bearing the portrait of Congressman Wanger and the inscription, "Congressional Convention, June 25, 1900, Bristol, Pa." The committees and ushers were provided with badges of the same design of white and red ribbons. The Liberty Cornet Band furnished music throughout the day and met the visitors at the trains and boat.

The Committee of Arrangements which decorated the hall, furnished the music, provided the badges and attended to all the details of the convention was composed of Thomas R. Vandegrift, James H. Brooks, Doron Green, William K. Fine and Joseph S. Thomas. They were assigned to their duties and received instructions from the Borough Republican Executive Committee. The committee that was so successful in raising the funds which made possible the carrying out the work was composed of Walter F. Leedom, Gustav Rathke, John Jeffries and Andrew Jeffries, members from each ward of the Borough Executive Committee.

THE DAY COMMENCES.

Delegates and visitors commenced to arrive by nine o'clock, coming by teams, trolleys, railroad and boat. The largest delegation was that which accepted the kind invitation of Captain Frank G. Edwards, of the Upper Delaware River Transportation Company, who placed the steamer Columbia at the free disposal of Montgomery and Bucks county Republicans. The Columbia reached the Bristol wharf at 10 40, making the run from the city in one hour and ten minutes, bringing a crowd of four hundred Republicans. It was owing to Captain Edwards' generosity, forethought and local pride that contributed largely to the success of the convention, for, from the remarks heard the prospect of a free excursion on the Delaware brought many people who would not have otherwise come. The trip was greatly enjoyed.

CONVENTION CALLED TO ORDER.

By 11 30 the delegates and spectators were comfortably seated in the auditorium and the meeting was called to order by Chairman Solly, of Montgomery county. Prayer was offered by Dr. Alexander Alison, pastor of the Bristol Presbyterian Church.

In addressing the convention, Temporary Chairman Solly said that the great Captain of the National Republican Committee said that that committee had made no mistake when it resolved to hold the National Convention in Philadelphia, and Mr. Solly declared that he believed he voiced the sentiments of every Montgomery countian present when he stated that the conferrees made no mistake in selecting Bristol as the place for holding the 1900 Congressional Convention of the Seventh district. He had attended every district convention for the past twenty years, and never before had he been received with greater welcome or with such a display of open arms.

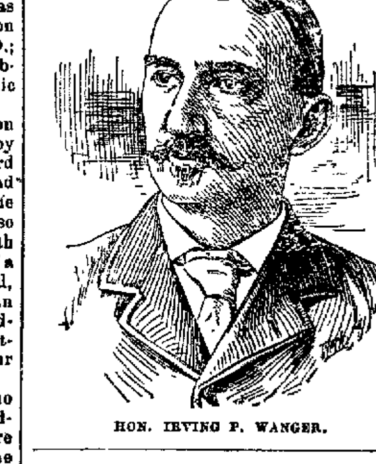
The speaker declared that never before had the party met under such favorable circumstances. The great party had just gotten through unanimously nominating a Presidential ticket, and now this great district, one of the richest in the country, was ready to make a unanimous selection by nominating Hon. Irving P. Wanger, without objection. Harmony prevails throughout, but nevertheless we must buckle on our armor and aid the triumphant election of McKinley and Roosevelt, and return to the halls of Congress a Representative to sustain the right arm of the Administration. We must return from the Seventh district the man who has always stood for the party and the flag. When we go forth today it should be with the firm resolve and with the same battle cry which the Nation gave in '96. The same cry will ring throughout this district and there must be no such word as fail.

Mr. Solly declared that he believed the Representative ticket would be elected by the largest majority ever before received, but such a result would only be assured by careful diligent and prudent work. Every district and every man who is a part and parcel of the great Republican organization should leave no stone unturned to make the party in this district supreme. Mr. Solly concluded his remarks in a storm of applause.

The secretaries called the roll of delegates and it was found that there were but two of Montgomery's 126 districts unrepresented, and five of Bucks' 77.

John G. Weinberger, of Milford, Bucks county, was elected permanent chairman by acclamation. The chairman thanked the convention for the honor conferred upon him. Messrs. Sellers and McIntosh, of Bucks, and Messrs. Sheib and Shaw, of Montgomery, were chosen secretaries, while John Wildman, of Langhorne, and John W. Weaver, of Norristown, were elected vice presidents. The committee on resolutions was next appointed by the chair, and consisted of J. Crawford Johnson, Bromley Wharton, Jacob R. Allebough, R L Bates, Watson Fell, W. S. Schlicter and John Johnson.

The permanent organization of the convention being effected, Evan R. Penrose, of Quakertown, called for a recess until two o'clock, which was met with a storm of objections.



HON. IRVING P. WANGER.

WANGER NOMINATED.

Chairman Weinberger declared that nominations were in order for a candidate for Representative from the Seventh Congressional District, and Thomas P. Chambers, of Newtown, took the floor. Mr. Chambers said he was prepared to nominate a man whom we all know by reputation, a man whom we have all watched, a man who has protected the farmer, the soldier and the mechanic, and the speaker defied anyone to point an adverse finger upon any action of the present incumbent. He therefore nominated Hon. Irving P. Wanger

William P. Young, of Pottstown, seconded the nomination of Mr. Wanger by telling an alleged joke, the point of which has not yet been discovered. Mr. Wanger's selection was unanimously made with a shout.

Mr. Solly then moved an adjournment until 2 o'clock, in order to give the committee on resolutions a chance to prepare the platform. He also announced that upon reassembling the convention would be turned into a grand ratification meeting—the opening gun of the campaign of 1900. Mr. Solly's suggestion was accepted, and a recess was taken and the crowd dispersed to the various hotels and partook of provided nourishment. A number of the distinguished visitors were hospitably entertained at the home of Joseph R. Grundy.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

Upon the convening of the afternoon session, Mr. Solly came to the front of the stage and announced that Chairman Weinberger had requested him to read the following resolutions reported by the committee:

The Republicans of the Seventh Congressional District of Pennsylvania, composed of the counties of Bucks and Montgomery, in convention, met at Bristol, Pa., this 25th day of June, 1900, renewing allegiance to the Republican party with its glorious record, give hearty concurrence to the party principles declared by the Republican National Convention at Philadelphia, June 20th, 1900, and the doctrines and policies therein enunciated.

We heartily endorse the nomination of William McKinley for President of the United States.

We recognize in our candidate for President the champion of the cardinal principles of protection and of sound money, and a statesman of brilliant achievements in peace and in war.

The dark days of the former Democratic administration, which threatened the overthrow of the industrial prosperity and the financial welfare of the country, are of the past and behind us.

When President McKinley assumed the responsibilities of his office he found the country with depleted treasury and on the verge of bankruptcy, and aided by wise legislation he has put its finances on a sound basis and restored its impaired credit; has infused new life into its industries and trade, and in less than four years has restored to our country an unprecedented prosperity and development, showering its blessings alike on labor and capital. Its workingmen then idle are now employed; its mills, shops and mines then closed are now fully operated. An unexpected foreign war was fought to a successful conclusion in a few months. Wise in peace and brave in war, President McKinley has safely guided us through most troublous times and added new lustre and glory to our country.

The nomination of Theodore Roosevelt for Vice President appeals to American manhood; in him we find the scholar, the sagacious statesman and the discreet hero He has been tried and not found wanting, in peace and in war alike he has given evidence of the highest type of American development. At Washington, at Albany, and at San Juan, always in the vanguard and ever ready to meet any emergency—he is the typical American in the highest sense, of him it may be truly said that the office sought the man and not the man the office. The nation demanded him as its candidate and accepts him as eminently fit for the position.

We endorse the nominations made by the Republican State Convention for Congressmen-at-Large and Auditor General and commend our worthy representative in Congress, the Honorable Irving P. Wanger, for his uniform attention to the best interests of his constituents, without regard to party affiliations; for his faithful adherence to the noble principles of the Republican party and for his loyal support of its measures in the halls of Congress We present Mr. Wanger to the voters of the Seventh Congressional District for their suffrages, as a man always actuated by pure and upright motives in public service, honorable in his record and reflecting credit on his district. We this day pledge the candidate our united support and will use all honorable means to secure their triumphant election.

We point with pleasure to the achievements of the Republican party with our honored President as its leader, assisted by his able cabinet and wise legislators in Congress, and confidently ask the support of our constituency for his open, successful and vigorous policies. The past is secure to us and the future opens with promises no less propitious and no less hopeful Our party has kept faith with the country in the past and we confidently ask its trust in the further continuance of past policies and in the development of the new issues which are before us.

We take pride in the promises of our party kept, it its work done, and its ability to meet unexpected questions and in solving them to the satisfaction of the country, and to the admiration of the world. We feel that the safety of the republic, the welfare of the nation, the happiness of the people, and continued prosperity are safe in the hands that now guide the ship of state, and that the great issues which must be met can safely be entrusted to them.

As a united and harmonious party, with superb leaders in Nation, State and District, we will go forward in the great battle of 1900 for our country, our flags and all the blessings vouchsafed by Republican institutions.

GENERAL STEWART'S ADDRESS.

After the reading of the resolutions, by Mr. Solly, which was frequently interrupted with applause, the chairman introduced Adjutant-General Thomas J. Stewart. General Stewart was granted an ovation.

The speaker declared he made a speech in the same hall eight years ago, on November 5, 1892. At that time he told a poll parrot story which, he had been informed, was remembered in Bristol 'till the present day. General Stewart got the audience in a good humor and then proceeded to give an eloquent address. He declared that the Republican ticket was good enough and strong enough for every one to support; that the meeting today opens the campaign of 1900. The same old Democratic party, objecting, obstructing and destroying, is to be contended with, but we will meet them and fight them, and conquer them. He declared there were men in the hall who stood in the convention for Fremont, men who are still fighting to keep the Republican party supreme. The speaker said the Republican party had controlled the destinies of the country for most of its time since its birth. The few years that the Democratic party was in control, the times were out of joint, labor was unemployed and discontent reigned everywhere. The Republican party always restored an era of prosperity. The National Convention had nominated a superb ticket and we today added one of our own citizens to the ticket—one of the best Representatives the district ever had. He is a man who has been true to the President, true to his constituents, and true to every trust. The mention of Irving P. Wanger's name elicited great applause.

MR. WANGER SPEAKS.

After a selection by the band the chairman introduced the Hon. Irving P. Wanger. Mr. Wanger said that it was with a heart overflowing with gratitude that he thanked the people of the Seventh district for this mark of esteem. He declared that the leadership of President McKinley was so clear, so wise and so noble that it was not difficult to follow. William McKinley was heralded as the advance agent of prosperity and the goods had been delivered according to promise. Prosperity followed the President's election from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Mr. Wanger then took up the policies of the Administration, and in a clear and forcible manner dealt with each issue from the Administration standpoint. Protection to manufacturers and laboring men and farmers was discussed. American shipping, banking, the war with Spain and the policy in dealing with foreign possessions, all received intelligent treatment. Mr. Wanger declared that President McKinley never sought the suffrages of the people by attempting to array class against class. His policy has been one of justice, man between man and nation between nation, for which it was no wonder he had been eminently successful. Under the Administration of McKinley and Roosevelt, business could be safely and profitably transacted.

YARDLEY AND GILKESON.

When Robert M. Yardley, Esq , addressed the audience, he declared he was persuaded of two things—that the Republican party still lives and that Bristol is in the ice trust. Bristol had done herself proud upon this occasion. The reception to the delegates and visitors was of a nature heretofore unknown in Congressional Conventions. But the Bristol people should be proud of her visitors; they were good people, and if they but knew it they were entertaining angels unawares. Philadelphia held the greatest National Convention ever seen, and Bristol today was holding the greatest of all Congressional Conventions. McKinley and Roosevelt would be elected, the speaker declared, in spite of all the Democrats and Spain. Wanger today had been nominated and the gates of hell could not keep him out of Congress. Mr. Yardley's address was concluded with a glowing tribute to McKinley and Roosevelt—the two soldiers and statesmen. One who was at Appomatox by the side of the silent Grant, and the other who charged up San Juan Hill and told his Rough Riders to give the Spaniards hell.

When Mr. Gilkeson responded to the calls of the audience, he was greeted with great enthusiasm. He declared that the only danger that confronted the Republican party was that which would result from over-confidence and the inherent cussedness of the American people, and cited the case of 1892, when President Harrison was defeated while the country was enjoying the richest fruits of his Administration. Mr. Gilkeson cited the scenes which prevailed in Bristol during the Cleveland regime, when houses were tenantless and poverty was stalking the streets; when hunger was being appeased and starvation relieved by organized relief societies. Today prosperity is on every hand, and if there was a vacant house in the borough the speaker did not know it. Mr. Gilkeson defined Republican issues and waxed eloquent when telling of the scenes he witnessed while traveling through Cuba, and how the McKinley administration was engaged in a work of reconstruction on the island.

Before adjournment, Joseph W. Shelly, of Doylestown, offered a resolution of thanks to the citizens of Bristol for their hospitable treatment, which was amended by William Solly, of Norristown, thanking Captain Frank G. Edwards for the pleasure of the delightful excursion on the Delaware. The resolution as amended was heartily adopted. Then convention then adjourned, and the great crowd dispersed to take boat, train and trolley to their homes—all delighted with the day spent in Bristol.

Everything was right except the weather.

Photographer Hay got a good picture of the convention in session.

Walter Leedom was an earnest worker for the success of the convention.

The Norristown Herald says Bristol is an ideal convention town.

Editor Sellers, of the Doylestown Republican, was mistaken for Congressman Wanger by one of the hotel keepers.

The four hundred Montgomery people who who came up on the boat are solid for Edwards.

The Auditorium was decorated under the direction of James H. Brooks, who by-the-way, is an artist in that line.

Among the newspaper men noticed at the gathering were; J. C. Sellers, Doylestown Republican; George W. NEWSPAPERS PRAISE BRISTOL.

Commendation Unanimous.

Doylestown Republican.

Bristol Republicans covered themselves with glory on Monday when they entertained the delegates and others who attended the Republican Congressional Convention which renominated Mr. Wanger for another term in Congress. Everything that could possibly be done to make the brief stay of the visitors pleasant was done. County Chairman Solly, of Norristown, in his address calling the convention to order, said that he had attended similar conventions in the district for twenty years and never before had such generous entertainment been provided Surely, that was high praise for Bristolians, but it was repeated by each visitor, thus making the commendation unanimous.

Best Convention in all Details.

Doylestown Intelligencer.

The Republicans of the Seventh Congressional District, composed of Bucks and Montgomery counties, met with a fine reception in Bristol on Monday, when the delegates of the two counties met in convention to place in nomination a candidate for Congress from this district. It was the general opinion that it was the best convention in all its details held in the district for many years.

The Republicans of Bristol deserve great credit for the splendid arrangements they had made for the reception of the delegates and others. It was the first political convention ever held in that ancient borough.

To Bristol Republicans.

Lansdale Republican.

BRISTOL GAZETTE AND OBSERVER:—The Republican congratulates, on behalf of the Montgomery delegates, your citizens on the complete arrangements made for the Congressional convention, cordial reception and entertainment meted out to all, and wishes to especially thank them for that delightful river excursion. By the way, ex-Alderman Heebner, of Lansdale, who for years was the leader of Lansdale band, says your band is all right too. And he knows a thing or three about music as well as politics.

Bristol's First Experience.

Perkasie News.

It was Bristol's first experience with a political Convention, and it was voted to be the most elaborate affair ever held in the district. The town put on gala attire, flags were hung from every house, bands of music paraded the streets and the large auditorium was handsomely decorated with flags and bunting. The steamboat Columbia made trips from Montgomery county to the old borough.

Royal Welcome.

Norristown Herald.

It was a royal welcome which the people of Bristol gave the two hundred and more visiting delegates from Montgomery and Bucks counties on Monday, when they assembled to name a Republican Congressional standard-bearer of the Seventh Congressional District. A band of music met the steamer Columbia on its arrival at 10.45, after making a run from Chestnut street wharf, Philadelphia, in an hour and five minutes.

Chairmen Praise Convention.

The following letters were received by John T. Smith, chairman of the Bristol Borough Republican Executive Committee, and show in what manner the efforts of the committees were appreciated by the delegates and visitors to the convention on Monday.

NORRISTOWN, PA., June 27, 1900.

JOHN T. SMITH, ESQ., Bristol, Pa.,

My Dear Sir:—On behalf of the Montgomery delegates to the convention on last Monday and their friends, I desire to extend to you and through you to the other members of the committee, our sincere and grateful thanks for the kind, generous and courteous treatment received by us all.

It has been my privilege to attend every district convention for the past twenty years, and there has not been one at which better treatment was accorded the delegates by all the officers of the organization than this one.

The comfort of our people and the delightful way in which they were entertained is owing to the good management on the part of yourself and committee, and we owe you a debt of gratitude.

With best wishes for the success of the ticket, and with regards to yourself, I am

Very truly yours,

WILLIAM F. SOLLY,
Chairman Rep. Co. Com.

DOYLESTOWN, PA., June 26, 1900.

MR. JOHN T. SMITH, Chairman of Executive Committee, Bristol, Pa.

My Dear Sir:—As Chairman of the Republican County Committee, and in behalf of the delegates and others who attended the Congressional Convention at Bristol yesterday, I desire to thank your committee for the very excellent reception given us. The decoration of the convention hall and the other preparation made for the reception of the delegates was all that could be desired, and a great deal more than was expected. The fact is again emphasized that when the Republicans of Bristol start out to do a thing, whether it be to roll up a large majority for their ticket or anything else for the success of their party, they do themselves "proud."

While in attendance at the convention, and since my return, I have heard nothing but praise for those who contributed to make the convention such a decided success.

With much regard, I am

Yours very truly,

JOSEPH W. SHELLY,
Chairman Rep. Co. Com.

CLEVER FORGERIES.

A CASE WHERE A MAN COULD NOT TELL HIS OWN SIGNATURE.

Some Tales That Have Been Told by Handwriting—Why a Clergyman Was Allowed to Accept a Call—A Story That Reads Like Romance.

Occasionally we see in public prints that certain forgeries are so skillfully executed that even the owner of the name cannot tell whether his signature is forged or genuine. This is considered by some as indicating extraordinary skill on the part of the forger and also that an expert's opinion in such a case must be of no value, since the owner of the name doesn't know his own handwriting. But there is nothing unusual about either the skill displayed or the occurrence. Writers themselves are usually unacquainted with those telltale minor characteristics which form the basis of an expert's opinion.

The writer was a witness in a case some years ago in which some bankers and others were testifying as experts on the other side. As they claimed to be able to identify offhand the signature of the plaintiff the writer had the plaintiff write his own name several times, leaving spaces between. In these spaces the writer forged the plaintiff's name. In less than ten minutes the attorney asked the plaintiff which were his and which were forged—so that the opposing experts might be properly cross examined—and the plaintiff, who but a few minutes before had watched the writer forge his name, was unable to pick out his own signatures, with the ink on them scarcely dry.

So much for knowing one's own handwriting.

The stories of many cases in the solving of which handwriting has played a prominent part read like romances.

A few years ago a committee from a church brought to the office of the writer several letters written and mailed on different dates from various cities calling the pastor of their church to fields of greater usefulness—at larger salaries—each letter offering a few hundred dollars more than the preceding one. Upon the receipt of each call a committee meeting was held and the pastor's salary raised to meet the offer of the call. The fourth call within a year caused the committee to decide that they had reached their limit and also aroused suspicion. When the documents were brought to the writer's office, two questions were asked—first, are or are not the four letters in one handwriting, and, second, are they in the handwriting of the person who wrote the standards (afterward admitted to be the pastor)? It was decided that all four "calls" were written by the same person and he the pastor. It was decided to let him take the last call.

Billy Woodward, alias "Big Hawley," the prince of gamblers and blackmailers, who boasted on the witness stand that he was "37 years old and had been arrested 37 times, but never convicted once," was convicted that time—the thirty-eighth—and by his handwriting. This conviction was for blackmail in endeavoring to frighten a wealthy and honorable gentleman into paying $100,000. Woodward always "played for large stakes," as he expressed it. He admitted that in three months he cheated his victims of over $1,000,000. Arrested time and time again, he wriggled out of the clutches of the law by various means—once on an alibi, proving that he was in jail in one town on the day he was charged with a robbery in another city.

Several years ago the New York courts brought to light a story which equaled in interest the tales of Dumas, Scott and Stevenson. A Boston newspaper writer and art critic of prominence and family, owing to the alleged discovery that he was using his paper to bull and bear the stocks in which he himself was speculating at the same time, left Boston in 1854. He took with him $70,000 which another man claimed and quietly established himself in New York.

By investment and speculation this snug fortune grew to $1,000,000 or more Yet no one in New York knew that the "Miser," as he was called, possessed enough to buy even the cheapest Bowery meal. He would hang around restaurants and eat scraps and leavings. Clothes he never bought and was always clad in filthy rags. His one absorbing passion was music, and it was the one thing for which he would spend money. He would beg admission and try to induce well dressed auditors to pay his way in, but if these schemes failed, as a last resort, he would pay for the cheapest seat in the house.

One cold day in the middle of December, 1885, the "Miser" was run over by a cab. When he was taken to the hospital it was found that he had no under wear, no shirt, no vest, only the ragged coat that he had worn for 20 years. He begged to be taken "home." And such a home—a squalid garret! Here he died a few days later.

A lawyer produced an old power of attorney given him by the "Miser." It was a document which gave absolute power to the attorney. This attorney claimed that the deceased had promised to leave all of his property to his "dearest friend," naming the lawyer. He had witnesses to prove this, and claimed that the old miser's trunk had been rifled and a will leaving the property to him (the lawyer) stolen.

A friend of the deceased remembered the "Miser" had left a bundle of papers, tied up in a large red bandanna handkerchief, in his care nearly 20 years before. The package was taken from the safe, opened and found to contain nearly $400,000. The Metropolitan bank informed the authorities that it held $40,000 more in the same name which had been idle nearly 20 years. A large amount in ready cash was found in the hair covered trunk in the attic. It is not too much to suppose that he was worth from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 when he died.

Upon this discovery the lawyer redoubled his efforts, and the power of attorney was mainly relied on to prove his contentions. An expert examination of the document brought to light that several lines had been added to it after it had been signed, and those added lines made it limited instead of unlimited, as it read originally. The handwriting and ink in the added lines were different from the originals, and in some places added writing overlapped the signature, thus proving that this writing was made after the signature. The expert proof was so clear that the claimant lost his case, and the property went to the heirs.—William J. Kinsley in Saturday Evening Post.

Until the reign of Henry VIII English sovereigns, as well as their subjects, ate with their fingers.

Pleasant Work For Spare Minutes.

General Lewis M. Peck, a distinguished veteran of the civil war, a bibliophile, if not a bookworm, was the leading worker on the volunteer committee which prepared the famous index of magazine and other short articles for the Brooklyn library, then under the management of the late Dr. Noyes. This work was an extension of Poole's famous index to periodical literature. Not long after the task was completed the general met at a reception a young woman who had just been elected librarian of a social club.

"I am thinking," she said, "of getting up a nice, complete catalogue of all the leading magazine articles for my library. I have considerable leisure time and like hard work. How long do you think it would take me?"

"It depends upon the amount of your leisure. The last one took 100 men five years each."—Saturday Evening Post.

OLD FAVORITES.

Love and Thought.

What hath Love with Thought to do?
Still at variance are the two.
Love is sudden, Love is rash,
Love is like the levin flash,
Comes as swift, as swiftly goes,
And his mark as surely knows.

Thought is lumpish, thought is slow,
Weighing long 'tween yes and no.
When dear Love is dead and gone,
Thought comes creeping in anon,
And in his deserted nest
Sits to hold the crowner's quest.

Since we love, what need to think?
Happiness stands on a brink
Whence too easy 'tis to fall
Whither's no return at all
Have a care, half hearted lover,
Thought would only push her over!
—Lowell.

An Old Man's Dream.

Oh, for one hour of youthful joy!
Give back my twentieth spring!
I'd rather laugh a bright haired boy
Than reign a gray haired king!

Off with the wrinkled spoils of age!
Away with learning's crown!
Tear out life's wisdom written page
And dash its trophies down!

One moment let my lifeblood stream
From boyhood's fount of flame!
Give me one giddy, reeling dream
Of life all love and fame!

My listening angel heard the prayer,
And calmly smiling said:
"If I but touch thy silvered hair,
Thy hasty wish had sped.

"But is there nothing in thy track
To bid thee fondly stay
While the swift seasons hurry back
To find the wished for day?"

Ah, truest soul of womankind,
Without thee what were life?
One bliss I cannot leave behind.
I'll take—my—precious—wife!

The angel took a sapphire pen
And wrote in rainbow dew,
"The man would be a boy again
And be a husband too."

"And is there nothing yet unsaid
Before the change appears?
Remember, all their gifts have fled
With those dissolving years."

Why, yes, for memory would recall
My fond paternal joys.
I could not bear to leave them all.
I'll take—my—girl—and—boys.

The smiling angel dropped his pen.
"Why, this will never do.
The man would be a boy again
And be a father too."

And so I laughed—my laughter woke
The household with its noise—
And wrote my dream when morning broke
To please the gray haired boys.
—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

What Is Slavery?

'Tis to work and have such pay
As just keeps life, from day to day,
In your limbs, as in a cell,
For the tyrant's use to dwell,

'Tis to be a slave in soul
And to hold no strong control
Over your own will, but be
All that others make of ye.

So that ye for them are made,
Loom and plow and sword and spade,
With or without your own will, bent
To their defense and nourishment.

'Tis to see your children weak
With their mothers pine and peak,
When the winter's winds are bleak—
They are dying whilst I speak;

'Tis to hunger for such diet
As the rich man in his riot
Casts to the fat dogs that lie
Surfeiting beneath his eye;

And at length, when you complain,
With a murmur weak and vain,
'Tis to see the tyrant crew
Ride over your wives and you.

Men of labor, heirs of glory,
Heroes of unwritten story,
Nurslings of one mighty mother,
Hopes of her and one another,
Rise like lions after slumber
In unvanquishable number;
Shake your chains to earth like dew,
Which, in sleep, has fallen on you!
Ye are many, they are few.
—Shelley.

The Brooklet.

Sweet brooklet, ever gliding,
Now high the mountains riding,
The lone vale now dividing,
Whither away?
"With pilgrim course I flow,
Or in summer's scorching glow,
Or o'er moonless wastes of snow,
Nor stop, nor stay;
For O, by high behest,
To a bright abode of rest
In my parent Ocean's breast,
I hasten away!"

Many a dark morass,
Many a craggy mass,
Thy feeble force must pass;
Yet, yet delay!
"Though the marsh be dire and deep,
Though the crag be stern and steep,
On, on my course must sweep,
I may not stay
For O, be it east or west,
To a home of glorious rest
In the bright sea's boundless breast,
I hasten away!"

The warbling bowers beside thee,
The laughing flowers that hide thee,
With soft accord they chide thee—
Sweet brooklet, stay!
"I taste of the fragrant flowers,
I respond to the warbling bowers,
And sweetly they charm the hours
Of my winding way;
But ceaseless still in quest
Of that everlasting rest
In my parent's boundless breast,
I hasten away!"
—Sir Robert Grant.

Renewing Life in Spring.

Thou, O Spring, canst renovate
All that high God did first create.
Be still his arm and architect,
Rebuild the ruin, mend defect,
Chemist to vamp old worlds with new,
Coast sea and sky with heavenlier blue,
New tint the plumage of the birds,
And slough decay from grazing herds,
Sweep ruins from the scarped mountain,
Cleanse the torrent at the fountain,
Purge Alpine air by towns defiled,
Bring to fair mother fairer child,
Not less renew the heart and brain,
Scatter the sloth, wash out the stain,
Make the aged eye sun clear,
To parting soul bring grandeur near.
Under gentle types, my Spring
Masks the might of Nature's king,
And energy that searches thorough
From chaos to the dawning morrow.
Into all our human plight
The soul's pilgrimage and flight,
In city or in solitude,
Step by step, lifts bad to good,
Without halting, without rest,
Lifting better up to best,
Planting seeds of knowledge pure,
Through earth to ripen, through heaven endure.
—Emerson.

The Tempest.

We were crowded in the cabin,
Not a soul would dare to sleep—
It was midnight on the waters
And a storm was on the deep.

'Tis a fearful thing in winter
To be shuttered by the blast,
And to hear the rattling trumpet
Thunder, "Cut away the mast!"

So we shuddered there in silence—
For the stoutest held his breath,
While the hungry sea was roaring,
And the breakers talked with Death.

As thus we sat in darkness,
Each one busy in his prayers,
"We are lost!" the captain shouted
As he staggered down the stairs.

But his little daughter whispered,
As she took his icy hand,
"Isn't God upon the ocean
Just the same as on the land?"

Then we kissed the little maiden,
And we spoke in better cheer,
And we anchored safe in harbor
When the morn was shining clear.
—James T. Fields.

Woman's Will.

Men, dying, make their wills, but wives
Escape a work so sad;
Why should they make what all their lives
The gentle dames have had?
—J. G. Saxe.

Action is transitory—a step, a blow—
The motion of a muscle, this way or that;
'Tis done, and in the after vacancy
We wonder at ourselves like men betrayed.
—Wordsworth.

Earthly Appearances.

The widest river may not be
The best to navigate;
The fairest words may be the ones
That hide the deepest hate.

The loudest laugh may only serve
To keep away a sob,
The sweetest kernels do not grow
Upon the longest cob.

The keenest edge may not be found
Upon the longest blade;
The sweetest songster may not sing
Within the fairest glade.

The widest seat is not the one
Where mightiest men have sat;
Sometimes the greatest mind is not
Beneath the biggest hat.
—S. E. Kiser in Chicago Times-Herald.

The Right Kind.

I like to see a girl
Who knows enough to furl
All her furbelows and get a man a dinner,
Who can sing a bit and play,
Who can sew, darn, knit, crochet—
Well, a girl, in fact, who's got some gristle in her—
A girl who loves her dad
And makes some fellow glad
And who doesn't sneer at any man who labors,
Who's angel of the house,
Yet, if she saw a mouse,
Wouldn't jump upon a chair and call the neighbors

I like to see a youth
Who'd rather tell the truth
Than resort to fairy tales or fabrications;
Who can look you in the eye,
Who, in short, would rather die
Than disappoint his parents' expectations;
Who, never fond of fight,
Can use his left or right
And can pay a hundred cents on every dollar,
To some one sweetheart true,
He loves his mother, too,
And he doesn't wear a bandbox for a collar.

I like to see a wife
Who wouldn't, for her life,
Tell the neighbors all her husband's little troubles,
Oh a woman full of hope,
Who could throw a man a rope
If she saw him in a sea of business bubbles!
A woman who has tact,
Good sense, a heart, well, in fact,
Almost any kind that isn't quite a noodle,
And who'd rather make a bib
For baby in his crib
Than embroider silken doilies for a poodle.

I like to see a man
Who, if he has a plan
For removing every evil from creation,
Now and then will give a cent
To his wife, but not repent,
And so ask for every mill an explanation;
Who, if he has to roam,
Will save a smile for home
And will never tell the sins of other people,
Who isn't a beginner,
Who himself has been a sinner
And who doesn't measure God with a steeple
—Edward F Burns in Boston Globe.

The Old Daguerreotypes.

Up in the attic I found them, locked in the cedar chest,
Where the flowered gowns lie folded, which once were brave as the best,
And, like the queer old jackets and the waistcoats gay with stripes
They tell of a wornout fashion—these old daguerreotypes.

Quaint little folding cases, fastened with tiny hook,
Seemingly made to tempt one to lift up the latch and look,
Linings of purple velvet, odd little frames of gold,
Circling the faded faces brought from the days of old.

Grandpa and grandma, taken ever so long ago,
Grandma's bonnet a marvel, grandpa's collar a show,
Mother, a tiny toddler, with rings on her baby hands
Painted—lest none should notice—in glittering, gilded bands

Aunts and uncles and cousins, a starchy and stiff array,
Lovers and brides, then blooming, but now so wrinkled and gray,
Out through the misty glasses they gaze at me, sitting here
Opening the quaint old cases with a smile that is half a tear

I will smile no more, little pictures, for heartless
It was, in truth,
To drag to the cruel daylight these ghosts of a vanished youth
Go back to your cedar chamber, your gowns and your lavender,
And dream, mid their bygone graces, of the wonderful days that were —Joe Lincoln in Saturday Evening Post.
